

```

select * from HR_Data
-- Q1: retr Employee No, Gender, Job Role, and Monthly Income for all employees in the Sales department who earn > $5,000 select Employee_Number, Gender, Job_Role, Monthly_Income from HR_Data
where Department = 'Sales' and Monthly_Income > 5000

-- Q2: find the total count of distinct Job Role options available in the company select count(distinct job_role) as TotalJobRoles
from hr_data

-- Q3: calc the total no of employees and the average Monthly Income for each Department
select department,
count(*) as TotalEmployees, avg(monthly_income) as AverageMonthlyIncome
from hr_data
group by department

-- Q4: find the number of male vs. female employees who work Over Time (Over Time = 'Yes')
select gender, count(*) as NumberOfEmployees
from hr_data
where over_time = 1 group by gender

select * from HR_Data

-- Q5: Find all Job Role titles where the average Job Satisfaction score is below 2.5, but only include job roles that have more than 20 employees in total select job_role,
count(*) as TotalEmployees, avg(job_satisfaction) as AverageJobSatisfaction
from hr_data
group by job_role having avg(job_satisfaction) < 2.5 and count(*) > 20

-- Q6: Calculate the total number of employees, the number of ex-employees (Attrition = 'Yes'), and calculate the Attrition Rate (%) for each department select department,
count(*) as TotalEmployees, count(case when attrition = 1 then 1 end) as ExEmployees, count(case when attrition = 1 then 1 end) * 100.0/count(*) as AttritionRate
from hr_data
group by department

-- Q7: list all employees (Employee Number, Job Role, Monthly Income) whose salary is higher than the overall company-wide average monthly income select employee_number, job_role, monthly_income
from hr_data
where monthly_income > (select avg(monthly_income) from hr_data)

```